Three miles southeast of Avoa a farmer named Hunt lost his barn and part of his stock. His house was slightly damaged and two members of his family slightly injured.

The storm next struck Oakland, four miles south of Avoa. Near this place the barn on the farm of Richard Fries was utterly destroyed and some stock killed. The family was absent at the time. A man named Pollock, residing on an adjoining farm, lost his barn, some cattle and had his house partly wrecked, but no one was hurt. A mile further on the wind wrecked the house, barn and other outbuildings of the Hunt, a farmer. The contents of the house were strewn all over the surrounding country. One member of the family was slightly injured. Between Avoa and Oakland telegraph and telephone poles were prostrated and communication cut off for several hours. The only lives lost, as far as known, were those of Mrs. Rolla Livingston and her five-year-old boy. The woman saw the fire coming and ran to a pasture to release the family stock. The boy followed her. Both were knocked down by the terrified animals. The fire passed over them before they could get out of the way. The body of the boy was almost consumed and Mrs. Livingston burnt but a few hours.

In another cable Gen. Otis expresses thanks to the president for his appreciation of the work of the army in the Philippines.

The full text of the dispatches from Gen. Otis are as follows:

The Americans to issue a proclamation granting the Filipino self-government and to recognize civil and religious rights similar to those enjoyed by the people of Canada; the Filipinos to control international mercantile relations; the Americans and Filipinos to enjoy equal rights in the islands; Manila to remain in the possession of the United States until congress decides otherwise; the American flag to fly over the capitals of the islands and in the most prominent positions along with the Filipino flag, except at Manila, where only the American flag shall fly; all vessels to fly the American flag with that of the Filipinos; the Roman Catholic clergy are to be under the same administration as that in the United States; Spanish clerical direction and intervention to be abolished; the status quo of rural property belonging to the religious orders to be maintained, without return to the antebellum state of affairs; hospitals and schools formerly administered by the orders, to be handed over to the government, the orders to retain only their present town property; the secular clergy to retain their property.
